Dear Colleagues,

Accepting a music video for credit is a new approach to help students remember what you teach.

Check this one out – a rap video about cell biology:

And here's a song about food safety prepared for graduate students:

Give it a go!

Below are dates of upcoming TLC events:

- TLC Lunch, Tues. 14 November, 12:15-1:15, in LTM-204 – Bring your lunch.

We'll watch and discuss a video of Harvard Professor of Physics, Eric Mazur, who shares his experience lecturing at Harvard and the changes he's made to his teaching along the way.

- Creating digital mapping projects with your students, Mellon Pedagogical Seminar, Wed. 15 November, 5-6:30, in C-104 – Wine and cheese will be served.

Facilitated by Russell Williams, in collaboration with Waddick Doyle, Elizabeth Kinne, Rebekah Rast, Robbie Robinson, Steven Sawyer and David Tresilian, this session will build on the seminars given by Digital Humanities expert David Wrisley at AUP in March this year. Colleagues will share interactive mapping projects they've developed with their students, discuss best practice and consider practical hints and tips for launching, engaging and rewarding mapping projects in and around the classroom.

- Final TLC lunch date this semester: Tuesday, 28 Nov., 12:15-1:15, room TBA

Have a good week!
