Objet : TLC News - Instructional design follow-up AND up-coming events

Dear Colleagues,

Our week of instructional designing with Nadine Aboulmagd from the American University in Cairo has come to a close, but have no fear, we're working on finding ways to support your course projects in the future. We would firstly like to thank you for the warm welcome you extended to Nadine during her stay at AUP. She was impressed by your enthusiasm and creativity, and touched by your gratitude. Secondly, we encourage you to contact the TLC to discuss instructional design, to contact Sandrine Cuperty in IT for technology training (please send your messages to helpdesk@aup.edu), and to contact Ann Borel in ARC for Blackboard support (aborel@aup.edu).

We also have two more important events planned for this semester:

Wed. Nov. 20, 12:15 in Q-609 – TLC Lunch

Talking about Speaking: Helping students develop presentation skills, with Mark Ennis, professor of AUP's course "Public Speaking in the Digital Age".

Mon. Nov. 25, 5:30-7 in Q-609 – Mellon Seminar

Student-Faculty Collaboration in the Liberal Arts: Lessons learned from the GLCA/GLAA-Library of Congress Program in Washington, D.C., with David Tresilian, Michael Stoepel and their students based on the research theme "Coming to America: The Early Arab-American Generations".

Best wishes,

Your TLC
