

Faculty Achievements

2025

AUP The American University of Paris

Foreword

At a moment when higher education faces significant financial, political, and technological pressures, the achievements gathered in these pages offer a powerful reminder of the university's enduring purpose. Across disciplines, AUP scholars and creative practitioners are examining democracy and conflict, artificial intelligence and human rights, climate change and sustainability, cultural memory, migration, and inequality. Their work shows how intellectual rigor, imagination, and curiosity can help us understand, and shape, a rapidly changing world.

In 2025, our faculty published books with leading international presses, produced poetry and literary translations, curated major exhibitions, screened films around the world, conducted scientific fieldwork, and contributed to public debate across languages and national contexts. The breadth of this work is distinctly AUP. It moves between archives and laboratories, courtrooms and museums, film festivals and international forums.

Yet scholarship at AUP remains inseparable from teaching. Faculty involved students in laboratories, podcasts, exhibitions, documentary filmmaking, literary publishing, fieldwork, and public events. Students thus encounter knowledge not as something finished and transmitted to them, but as something they can learn to investigate, question, and create.

It is with pride and gratitude that I invite you to explore the Faculty Achievements of 2025. These pages celebrate individual accomplishment, but they also tell a collective story: of a faculty committed to using knowledge and creative practice to understand the world, participate in it, and imagine what it might yet become.
